rites for 24 ON GANGPLANK

Lakehurst, N. J., May 11 (AP)—Department of Commerce investigators decided today to get a complete picture of the Hindenburg disaster from eye-witnesses before seeking the opinions of experts on what caused the explosion that destroyed the dirigible with a loss of 35 lives.

Chairman South Trimble, Jr., announced following a conference investigating board had studied the testimony of Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of Lakehurst naval station and William F. von Meister, vice-president of the American Zeppelin Co., but reached no definite conclusion.

Trimble prepared to leave for New York city to attend services today for the German naval station at Wilhelm F. von Meister, vice-president of the American Zeppelin Co., but reached no definite conclusion.

Gangplank Turns Pulpit For Air Funeral Rites

New York, May 11 (AP)—A gangplank stevedore at the North German Lloyd-Hamburg-American pier on the Hudson river was draped in mourning and banded with flowers today to serve as pulpit in a mass funeral service for 24 victims of the Hindenburg disaster.

The rites, set for 6 p. m. (E. D. T.), were for persons whose bodies will be sent to Europe for burial aboard the liner Hamburg, sailing at midnight tomorrow.

The board of inquiry sitting at Lakehurst to seek out the cause of the dirigible fire suspended its sessions for the day, allowing injured survivors and interested onlookers to attend.

Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador; Dr. Hans Borchers, German consul-general; and Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of the United States Navy were listed to speak briefly.

Two Protestant ministers and a Catholic priest will conduct the service.

Guards of honor were named from the liner Hamburg and the United States Army, Navy, and Coast Guard.

Representatives of the Swedish and Austrian consulates were invited to pay last respects to their nationals killed in the tragedy.

The body of Captain Ernst A. Lehmann, advisory officer on the Hindenburg, who died of injuries Friday, will remain in a Hoboken, N. J., funeral chapel until the arrival of his widow on the German liner Europa Thursday. It will be taken back to Germany on the liner's return voyage.

The Maine jurist, who recently imposed six-month jail sentences on six C. I. O. leaders for contempt to Maine shoe strikes, will be principal speaker tomorrow night at a coronation banquet given by the Order of the Sons of St. George at the Bancroft Hotel.

Chief Foley today refracted a permit to CIO leaders here to hold mass meeting on the Common across from the Bancroft, after being informed of the justice's scheduled speech.

House Engrosses Parole Board Bill

The House today engrossed and sent to the Senate the bill enabling for reorganization of the state parole board.

The new board will consist of five members instead of three, two of whom shall be women. An amendment offered by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of New York, which would have retained the present members of the parole board in office, was rejected.

Wins White House Job

Lawrence Girl Aide To President's Son

SELECTED AS SECRETARY

From a Water street insurance office to the White House is the glittering promotion that thrills Miss Katherine Gilligan of Lawrence today.

The young lady has been picked to be secretary to James Roosevelt, eldest son of his dad, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and James is to be secretary to the nation's chief executive.

Modest Miss Gilligan, who is 26, could give no reason today for her good fortune, but Julius F. Haller, her former boss at O'Brien, Russell & Company, says the secret is all-fold and to wit:

- 1—Efficient at taking dictation.
 - 2—Quick at transcribing notes.
 - 3—Being mum during office gossip.
 - 4—Courteous.
 - 5—Smiling and neatly dressed.
 - 6—Contentment with job.
- Haller congratulated Miss Gilligan and good naturedly grumbled that he had made the mistake of allowing her to report the James Roosevelt Forums during the political campaign of last summer.
- Miss Gilligan, who has lived with her parents in Lawrence, will report to the White House in Washington next week. Wearing a ring on her left hand she is free to make her home in the capital on short notice without breaking any male heart in Boston or Lawrence.
- Miss Gilligan has worked in the Water street insurance office since her graduation seven years ago.

BAN ON MAINE PLAN TO PICKET LABOR'S PLAN ALL THEATERS

Striking back at "Maine justice" which put six CIO organizers in jail for activities in the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike, a drive for nationwide boycott of recreational resources and industrial products of Maine was launched by Boston organized labor groups today.

Thirty representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the American Federation of Labor, the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Lawyers Guild, the American Federation of Teachers, consumers groups and liberal activists met last night at the headquarters of the textile workers organizing committee, it was announced.

Meanwhile the Lewiston shoe manufacturers, hounded by a strike involving 6000 workers now in its seventh week, were not in unison over the invitation extended to ex-Governor Brann to act as mediator.

As police broke up a near riot among pickets and workers in front of a shoe factory in New Auburn, Linwood Chase and Clement Trepanier, CIO strikers, were sentenced to four and two months sentences for assault and battery. Both appealed and are held in $1000 and $500 bail further court action.

PURE DYE LABORATORY TESTED

Londonderry Crepe Slips

Warwick, R. I., May 11—As the clock in the moss-covered City Hall steeple chimed midnight, Franz, a smoky-eyed cow, retired from the milk industry and went violently sour.

Franz lived in a barn owned by Demosthenes X. Charison, a hard-working poultry farmer who thought the knew something about cows until Franz put the cards on the table.

At midnight Charison pecked the barn to check up on rumbling noises, and there was Franz crouching at him.

Charison stepped aside.

Franz kept going, making rattling sounds in her throat. She gathered steam, ploughed through a new $500 barbed wire fence and disappeared into a neck of the woods known as Bald Hill.

Charison called state police, and while talking he cast an anxious eye out the window to note that Franz had reversed her field, pointed herself toward the main fence, this time a new wooden one. She then returned to the open country, perhaps forever, for local officers and state police were still hunting late today.

Said Charison: "Maybe it's because I called her 'Franz'."

THREE MILLION Women ARE STAYING HOME TONIGHT!

Why should women go outdoors for excitement when their favorite magazine is so glamorously attractive...

Some, in these Coronation days, will turn first to Sylvia Thompson's story of what happened to a King who relinquished an empire for a woman.

Some will start reading Phyllis Duganne's absorbing serial of young people who find it easier to fall in love than to find the money to get married.

Others will want to know what those picture mates—Myrna Loy and William Powell—really think of each other.

And others will plunge at once into the complete book-length novel by Lois Montross, with its fascinating inside portrayal of romantic young Americans in Paris.

And they'll all enjoy those swift, human, dramatic short stories—such as Margaret Lee Runbeck's Miss Webster Has Another Baby.

Join these alert three millions—The new PICTORIAL REVIEW-DELINEATOR is on the stands today. And it's just 10 cents.

Mating TIME

Modern Young People...their Careers and Courtships

WHAT a fascinating novel of young people of today! Christie—a romantic girl eclipsed by the brilliance of Kate, her writer-mother, who wants her daughter to make a good match...

Steve—fresh out of college, beginning his business career in a luxurious New York apartment, furnished by the rich parents of Alex, his roommate...

Miriam—alluring, crafty, adoring Steve and adored in turn by Alex, Steve's happy-go-lucky roommate. Does Christie make "a good match"? Does borrowed luxury spoil Steve?

In the complicated lives and loves of these young Manhattanites you'll find mirrored the problems of your own set. You'll be fascinated by the young people in the serial, I'll Go Your Way, by that understanding novelist, Phyllis Duganne. You'll sympathize with their ambitions—with their problems of whether or not to marry. It's in June PICTORIAL REVIEW-DELINEATOR.

A Royal Romance Five Years After A STORY FOR CORONATION WEEK

THIS YOUNG KING is giving up his crown and empire—for love of a charming commoner.

He would rather have a throne in his heart than wear the crown of an empire.

"You can't marry me," she says.

"I can marry whom I like," he answers.

The storm bursts. This King is too daring and democratic for his tradition-loving country. He must abandon this love, or abdicate.

Calmly he announces his decision. He will give up his throne for her.

What of the future? Can he find in virtual exile with this exquisite woman the joy he seeks?

Sylvia Thompson, noted British novelist, has written, in The Lilac Is in Bloom, an amazing story which predicts the future of the King she portrays.

While sheer fiction, her story is a striking parallel to the royal romance that shadows the Coronation. It gives an answer to what everyone is asking:

"Can a King be permanently happy if he surrenders his empire for a woman of the people?"

This is a story for Coronation Week and for all time. Read Sylvia Thompson's The Lilac Is in Bloom, in June PICTORIAL REVIEW-DELINEATOR.

Myrna, before she was cast with William, was so disappointed that she shut her eyes when he appeared on the screen. Does her distaste for him still endure?

And what does Powell think of his "screen" wife? Any ardor there? Well, after you read this article in June PICTORIAL REVIEW-DELINEATOR, you'll understand why he is so admiring in those husband-and-wife scenes.

Skiing Stunt Features Tyrolean Night Benefit at Pops

By BETTY ALDEN

"MERRILY WE ROLL ALONG" is a new skiing song... in spite of the fact that Arthur Fiedler and his orchestra played all sorts of Bavarian drinking songs and waltzes at the Tyrolean Pops last evening... and all the skiing enthusiasts who had gathered for the occasion joined in lustily, even to the extent of singing most of the words in German.

The "Merrily We Roll Along" note was followed by half a dozen skiers who offered one of the feature attractions of the evening... and a part of the program designed to make the Tyrolean Alpine effect complete.

The Ladies' Aid of the Infants' Hospital which sponsored the affair, achieved a wintry effect in the decorations with the stage lined with evergreens, a backdrop revealing snow covered peaks and the stage completely bordered with large cakes of ice.

Running from the center of the stage, down the full length of Symphony Hall, was a wooden ski slide.

During the intermission a group of expert skiers clumped out onto the stage in full regalia, to make their dramatic descent down this slide.

and as each one posed on the brink of the slope, those at nearby tables noticed that small rollers were fastened under the front and back of each ski... virtually converting them into a pair of roller skates.

Those roller skaters proved so temperamental that, even adept skiers as they are, some of the performers had difficulties in managing them.

Howls of delight and laughter followed the skiers on all sides, as they rolled, one by one, down the slope and along the full length of the center aisle... trying to keep both their feet heading in the same direction.

Several were not successful in the attempt and came a cropper (if the term may be applied to "roller skiers"), somewhere between row A and row GG.

Kitty Talbot, who spends most of the winter on the snowy slopes of northern resorts, was scheduled to be one of those venturesome indoor skaters... but evidently didn't care for the rollers and decided it would be a lot more fun to sit in the audience and watch her friends make the stunt.

She was dressed for her role as a spectator in a bouffant black taffeta frock which was very effective with her pale gold hair.

MARSHALL FABRY, JR., Eleanor Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Little of Chestnut Hill, had a nice comfortable seat in a fur-lined old-fashioned sleigh, for their job of selling posies and chances at the Tyrolean Pops last evening. All of Greater Boston's Community Fund hospitals will hold open house, and the public is cordially invited to visit any of them. Consistent guides will escort the visitors.

The Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals will show films depicting hospital work. Dr. A. Warren Stearns will lecture at the Boston Dispensary, while tea will be served at the Boston Floating Hospital and the House of the Good Samaritan.

Young Set Aids Pops

From now until May 27, brothers will have to protect their old clothes and caps because all the girls who will peddle the "Boston Blast" at the Bureaux Newsboys Foundation Pop Concert May 27, will be looking for appropriate costumes.

Yesterday afternoon, Helen Crocker, who is in charge of the feminine "newswoman" called her fellow workers to a meeting and tea at the Bureaux Newsboys Foundation Pop Concert.

At the meeting it was agreed that the official newswoman costume would be overalls or dungarees, a white shirt and a cap.

The scene of girls who will wear this utilitarian garb are Lucille Brooks, J. Holliday Phillips, Selva Rose Itskovitch, Betty Luss, Margaret Puckman, Susan Russell, Jane Eagle, Juliana Sweetser and Barbara Fulton.

After two years of outstanding service to the club, Mrs. Frederic W. Sheehan withdraws into the background and Gladys Carey of Brookline succeeds the throne of executive leadership, and yesterday's meeting was the official bid to the new officers and a farewell to the old.

Showered with congratulations on the day's success was Mrs. Edmund J. Butler of Cambridge, chairman of the day. Her navy knit was definitely individual, a tiny bob of pale pink topped the long tulle skirt. Her guests for the day included Mrs. Frank Comerford, silver fox, nonchalantly slung about her shoulders, and Mrs. Stephen Higgins of Brookline, who relieved her black crepe costume with large rhinestone clips.

Even the promise of a history-making club session couldn't lure the North River, W. Zetta Den Mrs. Franklin Miller and Margaret Donovan, from their subduing on the club porch. Nor did the sight of green tennis courts lure anyone to play a fast set of tennis. Nothing like a pleasant chat for a pleasant afternoon was the opinion of the majority.

Hospital Day 'Arabian Nights' Comes To Screen in Fall

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 11—Walter Wanger's 1937 splash is expected to be "Arabian Nights." Walter is taking the famous classic, modernizing it and sending it out to a waiting world with an all-star cast.

He hopes to have all his big-time stars lined up by September 1, the tentative starting date. T h e screen play is not yet finished, but is nearing its completion and in it are a lot of famous names.

The missing link in the chain is Charles Boyer, but as it is a French story, the French stars' committee is expected to be free to play one of the stellar roles. The story will be given with music, special settings and the glamour the title indicates will take at least three months to put on the screen.

"Three Smart Girls" put Dean J. Agnew on the movie map, and bought plenty of shelves into the Universal coffers—so you may be hanging on to the title. It is decided today to start the "Three Smart Girls" in "Three Smart Girls Go to Town" just as soon as the film is finished in "One Hundred and a Girl."

The original "Smart Girls" was written by Max Grey, David Reed and Charlie Wanger—if it is available, but a new one won't be a sequel or a continuation of the first. It will be a separate and distinct story.

Peter Arno, playwright and he is vital, reached Hollywood to begin his acting career. You, remember, started his career between the Goldwyn studios and Paramount for a service with Para finally signing out.

He will play himself in "Actress of Modesty" and he doesn't know that he's going to be Jack Benny some honest goodness competition for actress honors. He has a feature of herself in this Paramount musical in two orchestras. Audie's latest will play classical ballets in competition with Louis Armstrong and his famous band.

Chatter in Hollywood. Robert Montgomery showed up at the mass meeting of the Screen Actors Guild swollen in handgrips, one eye blacked and the left eye swollen. Beyond the bare face he came with his injuries. He said that he was hit with a baseball bat. Bob had nothing to say in our reporter concerning it. However it was, it certainly is a shame that he was in this condition it will be at

Mr. Charles F. Hurley, wife of the Governor, will pour at the tea and fashion show given by the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion, next Tuesday afternoon at the Hotel Kenmore.

With the coronation providing the world's news topic, let's stick to the royal theme. And so in relating the story of new officers at the Ace of Clubs luncheon yesterday at Longwood Cricket Club, let's merely say "The king is dead; long live the king."

After two years of outstanding service to the club, Mrs. Frederic W. Sheehan withdraws into the background and Gladys Carey of Brookline succeeds the throne of executive leadership, and yesterday's meeting was the official bid to the new officers and a farewell to the old.

Airmail Bride

By Hazel Livingston

SYNOPSIS

Marie Alexander, young and unsophisticated, satiates her longing for romance by corresponding via a letter exchange club with a young man she had never seen.

When Edward Wilson, the correspondent, visits her, Marie is filled with misgivings that he will not care for her. To impress him, she had written that her mother was an actress, and so she had been years ago, but now she conducts a beauty parlor in their home on the outskirts of Hollywood. Marie runs a circulating library there.

The young couple meet and are mutually attracted. On driving, Edward parks his car in a secluded spot and kisses her. "You'll be terribly important some day," she tells him, "and I wonder if I'll be big enough to play the part."

When he asks "What part?" She answers, "Your wife!" Marie is humiliated when Edward falters in his response, realizing that she had actually proposed to a man whom she has known only two days.

After that, she tries to steel herself against him but cannot resist his embraces. "You're so splendid—so right—and I'm so slow and afraid—" he says.

With that Marie pressed her wet cheek to his. She loved him—nothing else mattered.

CHAPTER FIVE

"Marie!" he shook her. Spoke sharply. "Marie, you've got to listen."

She wiped her eyes and smiled at him in the light. He could see the tears still glistening on the white blur of her face.

"Marie," he said in this new, tense voice, "Marie, we're in love, and there isn't anything we can do about it. I don't know how you feel about it—maybe you didn't want it to happen just this way either. Maybe you'd rather have loved somebody else altogether. I even thought—"

"I mean, I'd rather it had come later on, after I got on my feet, when I could really offer—"

"But that's out of the question now. I love you, and you love me—but that isn't enough."

She didn't answer. He waited. Her silence frightened him. "Marie—"

"Marie, we can't go on this way. I didn't expect to—care so much, and I'm sure that you didn't either. Only we do, and so—"

She took his hands in hers. "That's it all right, darling! You'll come back. I'll wait for you. Don't you believe that I'll wait for you?"

"I Love You"

"Wait for me! My dear, I can't wait! I love you. But I can't stay, either. I've got to get back. I've got to go back with them. But before I go, I'm going to get married. We're going to Las Vegas tomorrow. We—"

"Oh, yes, we can. We're going to. You can tell your mother something—anything—it doesn't matter."

"Tell her we're going on an all day picnic. I'll call her early in the morning—at eight o'clock. No, we'll better make it seven."

'Career Girl' Goes in Clear Beige

IT'S AN ARRESTING ensemble that the Fashion Congress picked for the career girl in her more dressy moments... clear, high beige with lots of the whitest white waffle plique, and black for accent. It balances delicately between the chic that's essential to an excellent impression and the restraint that's expected. Grand in navy, too. And wearable for lots more occasions. Miss Betsy Shrigley models. Notice the bat-wing collar, the resolutely squared shoulders, the full-lined cape, and the patent lace on the straw belt. For shopping information, phone Annie Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

MY pulses skipped a beat in true Victorian style as Dicky asked if Katherine's letter contained bad news.

"Letter?" I repeated mechanically. "What letter?"

"Oh! She didn't tell you about it, then?" Dicky replied. "That looks as if it did spell bad news."

"When did she get it? Did you bring it?" I queried rapidly.

"Gently, gently," he adjusted with a disarming smile. "It would take a lightning bolt to keep up with your questions. But I'll do my humble best."

He drew a provoking long breath, and spoke with maddening slowness.

"Number one," he intoned, "she received the letter within a minute or two of my arrival at the camp."

"Number two, I brought it. There was a special delivery stamp on it, and I brought it all over it, so I thought as long as I was coming directly up here, it would be better to bring it than to redirect it through the postoffice."

"Of course," I interrupted mechanically.

"I don't know how you feel about it," Dicky said suddenly, "but if she doesn't hear from Jack pretty soon, and something definite about that dame that's making jungle camp, I'm a bearable and interesting for her brother-in-law, I would be in favor of her winging down to Reno, and then giving Hui Meredith a break."

"I wondered if I was mistaken in thinking I heard in Dicky's voice an echo—probably subconscious—of the jealousy with which he once had regarded Jack Blackett, who before my father's return to the life, had been my only kinsman."

"Well," Dicky said suddenly, "when Dicky says 'I wonder if you do you intend to favor me with your opinion on this matter?'"

Youthful Posture Best Defense Against Age

By IDA JEAN KAIN

IT'S a woman's privilege to subtract a few years from her age—provided a dowager's hump and a double chin do not insult the eyesight of her friends.

These figure-aging defects can make you look older than you actually are. A pad of fat on the nape of the neck adds a good five years to any woman's looks, and a sagging chinline does no favors, either!

The pad and the sag are only your posture to blame for the unwelcome and untimely appearance of these two traitors to loveliness. Constantly carrying the head forward allows the fat cells to collect on the back of the neck, and gives an ugly line to chin and neck in front.

If you want to get the top of feet of incorrect posture, stand before a full-length mirror and, with the aid of a hand mirror, look at yourself sideways. Let the head poke slightly forward—not too much, just about as you would in reading or sewing—and the top of the head. Now, look at yourself in the hand mirror, and see how much younger you look. Isn't that posture worth cultivating?

Putting up with the entire body create the youthful right angle of the chin, and you will find that the dowager's hump and a youthful chinline do not pay together. To correct one defect is to get rid of the other. But the upward lift of good posture begins with the lower abdominal wall, which may be strengthened by the following exercise:

Don't look like chin in. See what I mean!

All right! Pull yourself up straight and tall, with an uplift extending from the lower abdominal wall, diaphragm, chest, chin, and the top of the head. Now, look at yourself in the hand mirror, and see how much younger you look. Isn't that posture worth cultivating?

Putting up with the entire body create the youthful right angle of the chin, and you will find that the dowager's hump and a youthful chinline do not pay together. To correct one defect is to get rid of the other. But the upward lift of good posture begins with the lower abdominal wall, which may be strengthened by the following exercise:

POSITION: Sit on a low stool and place the toes under the lower edge of a heavy piece of furniture, to another yourself.

MOVEMENT: Place the hands on the hips and slowly lower the body backward until the trunk is horizontal. Pause for a second, and slowly return to the upright position.

This is a strenuous exercise, and you should not attempt it more than two times at the beginning. It is also a thorough-going exercise, however, and you can put it to work on the neckline by tensing the neck muscles as the body is lowered backward, then, lifting the chin back still farther while the body is in horizontal position.

Stretching exercises of various sorts are splendid developers of lovely posture, and they are sudden death to such defects as double-chin or waddling gait. Stretch the head high and rotate slowly on the shoulders for the neckline. Stretch the body wide and rotate the trunk in wide, arcing circles for the waistline.

Go to work on your posture and you will eliminate the necessity of having to deal separately with the humps or bulges that mar the figure ideal.

Send for the leaflet of stretching exercises, "Stretch the Fat From Your Waistline, Double Chin and Waddling Gait," for the leaflet, "Let's Thin Awhile." Enclose a large stamped and addressed envelope for the leaflets and mail to Ida Jean Kain, Boston Evening American.

GRACE BEFORE MEALS

DEAR MISS BECKMAN:

When do you take the napkin from the table after you have been seated? Do you wait until after the blessing or remove it to your lap when you first sit down at the table?

If the blessing is given at once, it is best to wait until afterward to take the napkin from the table. Often when guests are too busy opening their napkins to person who is to say the blessing must be kept waiting.

DEAR MRS. BECKMAN:

Tell me, please, if I or the bride's family, should outfit my small daughter who is to act as a flower girl at a large wedding?

MOTHER.

You are the one who should outfit your daughter for the wedding at which she is to act as flower girl. The bride will tell you what she wishes, as to your daughter's costume, and you pay for these details. This is the custom.

Learn to Toe Tap

TAP! Tappity-tap!

Music in Gwen's flying feet, eye-catching rhythm in her speed! No wonder the crowd begs for her lively taps!

You'd never know she learned all by herself, without expensive lessons.

She found that all tap dances, no matter how hard they seem, are combinations of a few basic steps. You can make clear ringing taps by striking the ball of your foot, your heel, toe, or the whole sole of your foot to the floor.

The Toe Tap is easy to learn from a diagram like that in the sketch. Lifting right foot off the floor back of left, strike the point of right toe sharply against floor. Repeat until the tap sound clear as a bell.

Sometimes you'll want to vary your tap rhythm with a Slide, slide diagrammed. Stand on right foot with right knee slightly bent. With just enough of a hopping movement to start you, slide back on right foot. Finish with a toe tap. Now learn to keep your weight off your heels.

Learn to toe tap with our new page booklet, Tap Dancing and New Variations in our exhibition dance routines. Or use these to teach your friends, or in your movies. Also brand new toe-tap, waltz, rumba and tango steps.

Send for our booklet, Tap Dancing and New Variations in Social Dances, in Boston Evening American Home Institute, 10 West 11th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

How Modern Young Men Regard the Subject Of Kissing

It carried a plea to girls: "Please don't be Cheap!"
It was a collection of extracts from a girl's letter wondering why she had lost her boyfriend, who walked on the other side of the street to avoid her, when once on a time he could not get enough of her society.

adage tells us must not be looked to for help.

Here is a few extracts from his work:

THE MICK PAIRFAN:

"Of course I kissed her, who wouldn't? She always turned her mouth up to me lovingly, and she had smiled me much about it. I did exactly what she expected—kissed her."

"The trouble came when she pulled a broken heart on me, pretended she thought I was serious, and wrote to my girl back home."

"Perhaps she never loved me, but I had better luck, but, as the murderess remarked when he mounted the gallows, 'I was a fool, I was a fool.'"

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

Ann Marsters, only girl handicapper, today picked TRANSIT LADY to win the sixth race at Narragansett Park, while she named STILL ALARM to win the eighth.

Starwick, one of Miss Marsters' selections yesterday, ran second to place $4.00 to place. Pompous Genie, another one of Miss Marsters' selections, also ran second, and paid $4.20 to place.

Miss Marsters is conducting a novel racing experiment to see if the races can be beaten if one is conservative and wagers on only two horses a day.

Miss Marsters has accepted Walter O'Hara's offer of $1000, of which $500 was immediately given to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

The other $500 is being used as a betting stake by Miss Marsters.

The balance of this sum will also be turned over to the Basket Fund at the end of the present experiment.

DIXIANA JUVENILE OUTCLASSES MAIDENS

STARTS IN FOURTH AT GANSETT

By DAVID WILSON
(Selections for Fast Track)
BEST BET—KING'S HEIR, FOURTH RACE

Narragansett Park, May 11—King's Heir, a first-time starter which races for Dixiana, has only to live up to glowing advance notices to turn back the field of ordinary maidens opposing him in the four and one-half furlongs of the fourth stanza here today.

Son of Narragansett III, King's Heir is regarded as the most likely candidate of the Dixiana establishment. He has shown a great deal of him in training and should earn his racing debut as a first-time starter. I make him the safest wager of the day's card.
